Summary

A Pharmaceutical Sciences graduate from Manipal College of Pharmaceutical Sciences, I have always been curious about how healthcare, business, and technology intersect to solve problems and create meaningful impact. While my academic background is rooted in pharmacy, I have developed a strong interest in areas such as business strategy, marketing, product innovation, and emerging technologies shaping today's industries. Through my academic, leadership, and professional experiences, I have explored diverse domains across healthcare, life sciences, market research, business development, and digital transformation. These experiences have helped me build a broader perspective on how different disciplines can come together to drive growth and innovation. Looking ahead, I hope to contribute to building impactful solutions and strategies that create long-term value and drive meaningful progress across industries.
